CAMELLINE

PRESERVING AND BEAUTIFYING THE COMPLEXION.

Originally a California discovery, CAMELLINE has, wherever known, rapidly acquired the reputation of being the most perfect and reliable of all complexion preservers. It is not only a perfect skin preserver, but it is also a perfect skin beautifier. It is the only preparation of the kind that is so perfectly adapted to the requirements of the skin, and so perfectly adapted to the requirements of the complexion. It is the only preparation of the kind that is so perfectly adapted to the requirements of the skin, and so perfectly adapted to the requirements of the complexion. It is the only preparation of the kind that is so perfectly adapted to the requirements of the skin, and so perfectly adapted to the requirements of the complexion.

Office of GALE & BUCKLE, Druggists, Chicago.
It being our policy to be always faithful for any improvement which may be made in our preparations, we now take pleasure in adding our testimony to the merits of CAMELLINE for preserving and beautifying the complexion. CAMELLINE, as prepared by WAKEFIELD & CO., the principal Chemists of San Francisco, was observed by our senior partner, while recently in California. It is the only liquid for the complexion, having the sanction of the medical profession as harmless, while it is so perfectly effective for the purpose intended.

FAITHFULLY YOURS,
GALE & BUCKLE,
125 North Clark Street, San Francisco.
44 & 45 Monroe Street, (Palmer House),
111 Randolph Street.

New York: CANNELL, MANN & CO., Chemists and Druggists.
117 Broadway, 275 Fifth Avenue.
It is well known that many who consider the liquid preparations for the complexion to be more reliable than the powders, are deterred from using the former by the fear that all contain lead. CAMELLINE, for the complexion, prepared by Messrs. Wakefield & Co., the leading Chemists of San Francisco, is the only article for the complexion which is at once efficacious, and is certified by the highest medical and chemical authority to be harmless and free from poison.

We therefore take pleasure in stating that we now keep the CAMELLINE in stock, and that it is the only article for the complexion which is at once efficacious, and is certified by the highest medical and chemical authority to be harmless and free from poison.

While we consider this high scientific testimony to be of the first importance, yet we also permit, we would add the names of many distinguished ladies in the dramatic profession, who are the superiors of CAMELLINE.

Emma Nevada, Etelka Gerster, Adelina Patti,
Mary Anderson, Mrs. Scott Siddons, Clara Louise Kellogg,
Fanny Janauschek, Alice Oates, Sarah Jewett,
Fanny Davenport, Jessie Vokes, And Others.

MADEIRA, WAKEFIELD & CO.—Gentlemen: Madame Patti desires to transmit her warmest thanks for your present of CAMELLINE, of which she had heard from many lady friends. She has to repeat the praise of your CAMELLINE from all sides. Madame Patti desires to send you her best compliments.

WE have, in addition, in our possession, many letters from well known society ladies, all of whom are testifying to the merits of CAMELLINE; but these may well be omitted as a slight trial is only necessary to convince.

FASHION AND GOSSIP

First of the Eighteenth Ward Serial Parties.

THE COMING B. of L. E. BALL.

The Pleasant Hours—The Culmer Surprise Party—Personal and General—Etc.

The First Serial Party.

Nothing that has occurred in the way of dancing parties this winter could be pronounced more absolutely pleasant than the first of the serial parties, which was held in the Eighteenth Ward School House last Friday evening.

A large party of young ladies and gentlemen assembled, apparently with the intention of enjoying themselves thoroughly, and from the expressions of pleasure heard after the affair was over, the conclusion is that they did not anticipate too much. After the party was over a number of those present who were fortunate enough to receive an invitation, went to the Eldridge residence, as the guests of Mr. B. R. Eldridge, and there partook of a supper, characteristic of the taste and hospitality of Mrs. Eldridge, under whose direction it was served. A still larger number invited themselves to be catered to by "Coffee John."

Those present at the party were: Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Spencer, Lieut. and Mrs. Willard Young, Miss Alice Dinwoodie, Miss Emma Jennings, Mr. and Mrs. Leo H. Clawson, Miss Marie Teasdale, Miss Grace Young, Miss Dwyer, Miss Cora Hooper, Miss Fannie Young, Mr. J. W. Campbell, Mr. W. B. Wallace, Mr. Charles Dwyer, Mr. D. S. Spencer, Miss Sadie Sharp, Miss Nell Sharp, Miss Katie Sharp, Mr. Sam Barratt, Mr. J. B. Toronto, Mr. B. R. Eldridge, Mr. Ernest Eldridge, Mr. S. K. Hooper, Mr. Henry Dinwoodie, Miss Price, Miss Thatcher, Miss Caine, Miss Lulu Clawson, Miss Needham, Mr. Walter Jennings, Miss Amy Richards, Mr. Grant Hampton, Mr. Henry Jacobs, Mr. Horace Eldridge, Mr. Geo. Romney, Jr., Mr. Jas. E. Jennings and Mr. J. E. Caine.

The next party of the series takes place a week from next Friday, and the success of the first serial makes that of all the others sure.

The Culmer Birthday Surprise.

A very pleasant gathering of the relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Culmer assembled by secret invitation at their residence, on Thursday evening last, each one of the party enveloped in a winding sheet, hooded by a pillowcase and masked. The occasion was the anniversary of the gentleman's birthday, and the muster was the outcome of the plotting and scheming of Mesdames Radcliffe, H. L. A. Cul-mer, Wilcox, Murphy and one or two others. The scheme worked well, the result of it being one of the greatest surprises when the host and hostess returned from town in the evening to find their home in possession of the guests who knew not whom. Some remarkable guessing was indulged in by the victimized pair as to the identity of the man and woman. This difficult feat accomplished, dancing was indulged in, and after that a good programme, embracing singing, instrumental music, recitations and readings was carried out under the direction of Mr. Willie Culmer. An excellent lunch with coffee was served by the ladies at about midnight and this, with card playing, checkers, more dancing and lively conversation, combined to make the event a memorable one for those who were present, and one which Mr. and Mrs. Culmer will remember with pleasure. The names of the surprisers are: Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Culmer, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. A. Culmer, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Culmer, Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. E. Evans, Misses Laddell and Barr, Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, Dr. and Mrs. Ewing, Mr. A. Culmer, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey, Mr. and Mrs. Whitley, Mr. and Mrs. Thrill, Mr. and Mrs. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Erskine, Prof. and Mrs. Radcliffe, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Ames, Mrs. Snedden, Will Shell, Misses Louise and Alice Simmons, Mrs. Sheldon, Miss Thirkill, Miss Wells, Mrs. Fannie Mulhall, Mr. and Mrs. Farrell, Mrs. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. F. Culmer, Sr., Miss A. Amos.

The Evening Social Club

The first grand hall of the season by the gentlemen composing the Evening Social Club will be given in Jennings' Hall, on Thursday evening next. Invitations have been issued during the past week, and the well-merited success of the club during last season leaves no room for doubt but that the opening ball this year will be all that the members of this popular social club could desire.

The Knights of St. Denis.

The Knights of St. Denis give another of their popular parties at Olympic Hall on Friday evening next.

AUGUSTUS PODLECH, Proprietor.

I rehearse to you and which I wish now to reiterate that you may not have sight of them: First, the brief and anxious journey of Mr. Snow in the same conveyance with Sarah to the place where their daughter was lying place with a fractured skull, second and third, the two calls of the defendant at the house where their dear daughter was upon a bed of illness—calls made in the presence of the doctor, and which were for the obvious and undisputed purpose of learning of the condition of his sick child; fourth, the ride taken by my client in company with Harriet and two other persons to the house of Harriet's son; and fifth, the anniversary dinner eaten with his hundred friends. And upon those bare facts you gentlemen of the jury, are asked in this, a hall of justice, to render a verdict of guilt! And of what? Of unlawful cohabitation of having lived with these women as husbands live with wives, and of having held them out to the world as his wives! Gentlemen, the Supreme Court has held that unlawful cohabitation means these two things, and that without both of them proven, it cannot be maintained. First, and any reasonable man must acknowledge, that neither of these essential elements has been established.

At this point I desire to warn you against falling into a pitfall which I fear may be opened for your feet. It has been suggested by counsel in other prosecutions of a similar nature, and I have a right to anticipate it in this case. I am compelled to advert to it before its utterance, as I have no privilege of reply to the prosecutor's closing speech: "It has been very ably and significantly suggested that because my client did not live with these women and perform his marital duties to them all alike, he ought to be convicted of this offense because of his injustice and partiality." Gentlemen, this is a monstrous idea. The law required my client to live with not more than one wife, and because the prosecution cannot prove that he has lived with more than one, he is still to be convicted of the offense, and such absurdity and cruelty are justified as a measure of public policy! Gentlemen, as widely as the poles are separated, you may differ from the defendant's religious belief, from his marital methods, from his taste and fondness; you may coincide with an ingenious but heartless theory heretofore advanced by the prosecution in this court room, that this defendant's separation from a portion of his family was a desertion and neglect of some of his wives; that this conduct was not only an injury to the women who were thus deprived of his companionship, but, gentlemen, that can have nothing to do with your verdict. Did the defendant endeavor in good faith to obey the law? You are not sworn to judge Lorenzo Snow for what he has not done, but for what he has done; not for having failed to perform his marital duties, but for having lived with these women as his wives. The defense sets up the claim that Lorenzo Snow has obeyed the law. The prosecution's argument would lead you to say that if so he ought to be convicted of a violation of the law, because a compliance with the law would be an act of inhumanity. Further, my client is not on trial under a charge of "religious fanaticism." This community is not on trial; nor is the Mormon church arraigned, but the sole point at which all these circumstances and arguments center like the spokes at the hub of a wheel, is this—simply this and nothing more: Did Lorenzo Snow, during the year 1885, live with any but one wife, more than one woman as a wife? Under the evidence only one answer can be given, and that answer is "no."

Of course, gentlemen of the jury, you naturally find some embarrassment in thus repudiating an argument upon which the prosecution in a similar case has laid so much stress. You have supposed, doubtless, as I was taught, that the duty and aim of a public prosecutor was to stand in the Temple of Justice, not clamoring for the blood of liberty of any man but to represent truthfully and impartially, fully to the jury all the facts necessary for consideration in making up a just verdict. He should endeavor to be as eager for justice to the man on trial as is the paid advocate of the defense. It has been my fortune to serve for some years as a public prosecutor, and in that capacity I have many times had the honor of appearing in this court before the distinguished judge who was the predecessor of His Honor who sits upon this bench. But, gentlemen, I assert—I trust with no unseemly pride—that I never forgot the fact that I had no right to demand from any jury a verdict of guilty unless my own brain and conscience united in saying that, if I were acting as a juror in the case, I would feel bound by the facts to render such a verdict. This is the test. Apply it to the vigorous counsel for the government. Will he stand here and say that if he had taken your oath in this cause now on trial, his conscience should uphold him in voting for a verdict of guilty? I am reminded of an instance which occurred not more than one hundred years ago last Thursday, and not more than one hundred miles from this court room. A certain adroit and eloquent counsel for the government, in a case very similar to this, demanded most impressively the conviction of the defendant, and a short time afterwards, while in conversation on the street, the same gentleman spoke to this effect: "It is my firm belief that the man on trial yesterday had honestly endeavored to obey the law, and had done all that should be required of him."

Gentlemen of the jury, you stand here probably in a position of higher importance and holding a greater trust than the distinguished judge or the energetic prosecutor who represents the mightiest nation under heaven. For you are here as a constitutional bulwark—the wall of defense between my client, Lorenzo Snow, and the unheeding, ill-judging clamor of millions of people demanding his conviction. Do not mistake the gravity of this occasion, nor of your position. To my client, your verdict means either the retention or sacrifice of all that makes life radiant in human eyes and precious to the human heart. But that is not all. A devastating flood of convictions, in answer to a popular prejudice, is sweeping over this devoted land of Utah. Will you have the courage today, before the rash becomes indiscriminate and more disastrous, to dam that flood with your disapproval and say to the world, and if not to the opinion of this day, to the future: "It is possible for a Mormon accused of this offense and tried before a jury of his sworn opponents, to receive justice—to be acquitted when the evidence and the facts do not, cannot warrant his conviction?" Never, perhaps, in all the annals of history, has there been a grander opportunity to show the strength and lasting worth of true manhood than you gentlemen possess this hour. Will you be equal to the emergency?

It requires heroism, and the reward comes not to-day. But history is full of bright pages flashing with the deeds of men who dared all and whose very names make your hearts strings thrill. You do not forget Arnold Winkelreid, the Swiss patriot, who rushed against the oncoming, solid phalanx of Austrian spears, coming with swift tread like an irresistible public clamoring force. He seized an armful of the glittering steel and buried the points in his own breast, while his companions broke through the opened way which had been made for liberty, and Switzerland was redeemed. Go back a few ages among the legends of imperial Rome and recall how a vast crevice burst open in the earth, yawning at the very portals of the forum. The sacred oracles cried that it would never close and Rome must perish unless a sacrifice of some choice human life were offered. In an hour, back came the flower of Roman chivalry, a noble youth with the fire of grand daring flashing from his eyes. He was adorned in holiday attire; he rode his highest meted barb, and when he reached the gaping fissure with one quick spring, brave, handsome rider and richly decked steed had sunk out of sight into the abyss which closed forever. But these are only instances of physical courage. It requires even a quality of greater bravery to be a moral hero. There is one Englishman whom Americans love better than any other of his race and time, I mean Pitt—the man who had the courage to stand in the British Parliament and defy the wicked government's project for the annihilation of liberty in this land. Such an opposition as that of which he made himself the champion might mean disgrace, the ruin of all his ambitious projects; but he dared to say to the King and the ministry: "If I were an American, as I am an Englishman, while a foreign foe remained in my country, I would never lay down my arms, never, never, never." Remember our own patriots of last century, who declared the divine idea that all men were free and equal. They walked in a pitiless storm of hostile opinion. Even later, almost in our day, the men who led the movement for the abolition of slavery were execrated by the public clamor as wretches unfit to live, as "nigger stealers," worse than murderers. These men all went on their way, knowing that the day of justice would dawn when their heroism would be recognized at its full value.

It is not so difficult an act to perform a deed of physical valor, with the sound of life and drum, the spirit, the enthusiasm, the wonderful physical power which is imparted to a man in the clangor and glory of assembled multitudes of warriors or admiring, applauding friends. But it is more, for a man to sit down in the presence of his soul and say: "For the sake of my own truth and manhood, I will perform this act of justice, and I dare to face the opposition of the world." Gentlemen, if you are animated by this exalted feeling, this court room will not only be the Temple of Justice to my client, but it will be to him his city of refuge, within the gates of which the hating multitude may not pass.

I have a few words more to say, gentlemen, before I close. My client was convicted last week upon a similar charge, only the alleged offense was placed a year later. You see his hair—more than seventy years—his hair is white with December frost. I ask you to consider well what you are doing before you render a verdict which would impose upon him an additional penalty. Imprisonment means more in his case than in most others. It means more than the deprivation of the necessary comforts and attentions with which his age and circumstances have made him familiar. It means more than the change from the society of loving friends, to be the involuntary companion of thieves and murderers. Yes, gentlemen, for to my client, it may mean—death! Death within the prison walls! And yet, do not understand me that I am here as a suppliant for mercy to my client. God forbid that I should ever be placed in any earthly court where I should have to ask for mercy on his behalf or that of any other man. I ask simply for Lorenzo Snow to-day, justice, brave justice. I ask for nothing more; I expect nothing less. I hope and trust that you may be able to rise to the dignity of this hour, that you may be able to see and grasp your opportunity to become moral heroes, that you will step forward and stop this onward devastating rush of injustice and wholesale conviction, which is sweeping through this Territory, and which your outstretched hands can stay.

But, gentlemen, if you fail to view the grandeur of your position, if you fail to act as becomes moral heroes, mark my word: the future will bring its retribution of regret to your hearts. No act of oppression can go forever unwhipped of conscience and destiny. This is true of individuals and nations. Read the blazing lesson of history, and it says that from the hour when Persia's myriad army was tossed like chaff from the shore of the land which it had hoped to desolate, down through the many ages until the hour when the Corsican corporal swept like the angel of war in an avenging triumph over the tyrannical nobility of Europe; yes, search your story until this present hour; you will find that destiny has been lying in wait to bring retribution to every family and every land which has transgressed the laws of justice and humanity.

Gentlemen, this world has had her chapters written in blood and tears. She needs no more. Your verdict, now to be rendered, will become a part of an important historical epoch. I entreat you, by the regard which you have for your own fair fame; by your love for your children, who will judge you in the light of the future, by your admiration and hope for your country and her reputation, that you will not be swayed by prejudice, but that you will be guided by facts honestly stated. I ask you in the name of all that is sacred and dear to the human heart, to render a verdict which will not pale your faces, nor bring to the cheeks of your posterity the blush of shame; and that you will render such a verdict as the history of your country may truthfully say was not animated by cowardice or vindictive hate; and that verdict will be "not guilty."
